Happy September!

It's also Labor Day weekend, a time for us to honor the good work people do to make our nation and world a better place. By using the gifts and talents and creativity the Lord has given to us, we are able to do remarkable things. Let's not underestimate the great ways in which we glorify God by working hard in what He has called us to do!

Now that we have to put away our white clothes (I've never understood why we can't wear white after Labor Day), this is a good weekend to reflect on the summer:

-What were the good things that happened these past few months? Can you give praise to God and thank Him for these things?

-What has been tough over the preceding weeks? Can you spend some time processing them with the Lord, letting Him love you in them?

-And where are the areas in life where you'd like to improve? Or where you need to improve even if you don't care to? Could you go to confession soon to get the graces to help you grow?

Consider working through these things with God; it might be a difficult thing to toil through, but there will be great fruit, reflecting on all these questions.

God bless you! I'm looking forward to a faith-filled September with you all!

Fr. Fallon
